

Imprimis Pharmaceuticals Now Making Available Two Glaucoma Drugs on FDA's Drug Shortage List

January 30, 2018

SAN DIEGO, Jan. 30, 2018 /PRNewswire/ -- Imprimis Pharmaceuticals, Inc. (NASDAQ: IMMY), an ophthalmology-focused pharmaceutical company, today announced that it is now dispensing preservative-free dorzolamide and a preservative-free dorzolamide/timolol formulation after dorzolamide and the commercial products, Cosopt® and Cosopt® PF, were added to the FDA Drug Shortage List. These two sterile topical medications were prescribed approximately 4 million times during 2017, according to IMS data accessed by the company, for patients who suffer from glaucoma, a chronic and vision threatening disease. Imprimis's preservative-free compounded formulations are available in all 50 states and Puerto Rico. To order, please click here.

Imprimis will not dispense these formulations with preservatives such as benzalkonium chloride (BAK) which is typically used in many topical glaucoma drugs. According to a 2013 paper in Clinical Ophthalmology, "Adverse effects attributed to BAK, including conjunctival inflammation and fibrosis, tear film instability, corneal cytotoxicity, anterior chamber inflammation, trabecular meshwork cell apoptosis, cataract development, macular edema, and even systemic effects, have been well documented. These effects can lead to ocular discomfort, poor intraocular pressure control, glaucoma surgery failure, and decreased patient compliance."

Imprimis remains committed to providing patients and their healthcare professionals with high quality affordable compounded formulations when they are clinically appropriate. By partnering with physicians to meet their patients' unmet needs, Imprimis continues to make progress in meeting its mission of bringing high quality innovative ophthalmic formulations to physicians and their patients.
